6th Annual Effective Teaching Institute

CALL FOR NATIVE PRESENTERS!

Share your knowledge and insights with our community by presenting at the 6th Annual Effective Teaching Institute!

We're currently seeking dynamic Native presenters to lead engaging sessions on topics related to Native education. Whether you're a seasoned professional or a newcomer with fresh perspectives, we welcome your submissions.

Effective Teaching Institute (ETI) is geared toward teachers, professors, and administrators from preschool to higher education. At ETI we endeavor to share cultural insights, examples, models, and hands-on experiences for those looking to strengthen ways to work with Native students.

Native presenters are encouraged to share their scholarly work, offering a unique opportunity to showcase innovative research, engage in meaningful discussions, cultivate relationships, and contribute to the advancement of knowledge within their field.

We invite proposals from individuals with expertise in specific areas related to Native Tribes and peoples, including but not limited to Natural Resources, Culture, History, Art, Fishing, Language, Writing, Special Education, Reading, Health & Wellness, Technology, Economics, and more. We welcome all submissions!
